

Revisions for all Writing Experiences

If your submission is marked “No Credit,” you can resubmit it as many times as you like until it receives “Credit.” An assignment that is submitted late and receives a grade of No credit may still be revised; the final grade will reflect the number of days the first submission was late.

Due date: by the end of the semester (December 18)

A revision includes three things, and I will not grade any revision without all three:

- The original work that you submitted and which was graded
- The new version
- A process letter in which you explain what you’ve done differently in this revised version and what you’ve learned in the process

As you prepare your new version, use the feedback you received on the assignment and on other assignments. Also refer to Writing #1 for all of Dr. J’s writing and editing suggestions, as well as resources on the class website: www.drjonesmusic.me/writing-tips
